A View of Messina

PARATROOPS ATTACK CATANIA IN REAR

ALLIED paratroops have been landed north of Catania in an effort to take the city's defences from the rear as General Montgomery's troops face Axis counter-attacks at its southern approaches.

Reports from General Eisenhower's Headquarters said that half of Sicily is now under Allied control and that a general Axis withdrawal from Central and Western Sicily is under way as the Canadians and Americans — who, it was announced yesterday, have captured Enna—push on to the north.

Axis Elastic Defence

A Berlin statement says that in the area of Enna the bulk of the Axis forces avoided the Allies' grip by elastic defence manœuvres.

ENCIRCLEMENT THREAT

A general Axis withdrawal in Sicily, with the exception of the powerful German forces around Catania, towards Messina, in the north-eastern corner, was reported by pilots of Allied scout 'planes late yesterday, states Reuter's Special Correspondent at Allied H.Q., North Africa.

This followed the capture of Enna, key communications town in the centre of the island. Two Italian divisions are streaming to the east along the northern roads.

CRITICAL

The Catania defence force itself—at grips with the Eighth Army—is in grave danger of being trapped by General Alexander's thrust from Enna. The general situation along the whole front is expected to yield most interesting developments in the near future.

Canadians and Americans, who took Enna on Tuesday, now threaten to turn the Axis line in front of Catania. Half of Sicily's 10,000 square miles are in Allied hands, and the Axis position is critical.

The last roads still available to the Catania garrison, which is still counter-attacking, are under constant bombardment. Allied warships, cruising up and down the coast, are shelling the Catania-Messina highway where it skirts the lower slopes of Mount Etna.

The other road west of Mount Etna has been continually attacked for the past 48 hours. Randazzo, important communications centre on this road, has been bombed repeatedly, and fighter-bombers swooping over the road are dive-bombing Axis transport.

WEAKENING

Observers in the battle area reported a general retreat along all the roads leading up from the centre of Sicily. Resistance was weakening to the point of collapse almost hourly. The Catania-Messina highway is highly vulnerable to air attacks and is expected to be jammed with troops and transport if the withdrawal continues at its present rate.

The whole area in front of the Allied troops is being completely covered with bombs. Anti-aircraft opposition is almost negligible and no fighters have appeared recently. The Canadian-American spearheads well beyond Enna are thrusting deep into Sicily's mountain backbone along the north of the island.

But the battle of Catania is still of paramount importance. Although it has already lost control of the Plain, the German Command is still throwing in one counter-attack after another. The battlefield is strewn with burned out Axis equipment.

General Montgomery's men are holding firm. Their vanguards, still prodding towards the city, are making good progress and taking a heavy toll of the crack formations opposed to them.

HEAVY LOSSES

Catania is still being held—but at the cost of very heavy casualties. It is uncertain whether Axis resistance is a holding action to provide an escape for the remaining forces, or is designed to hold out until the arrival of further reinforcements. Whether the Axis Command will decide to defend the north-east corner of Sicily remains to be seen.

An Associated Press correspondent on a British cruiser off Catania described the shelling of the town at two miles' range. The never-ending rumble ashore, he said, seemed to make the ship quiver, even five miles distant. Battle smoke covered the whole coast, and drifted to sea increasingly as the day wore on.

At two miles' range, he says, shore batteries opened fire, and shells splashed so close that fragments rained as high as the bridge. The cruiser replied, at point-blank range, with all her heavy armament. Destroyers engaged the shore batteries as the cruiser pulled out of shore range, but continued to shell the town for eight hours."

"DYING CITY"

Vivid accounts of the Catania battle were broadcast by German Radio last night. One front-line reporter, describing the scene south of the city, said: "Day by day the calm sea is rent by the broadsides from enemy ships. The houses of the dying city of Catania collapse. Again and again the ruins are hit."

The important bridge to the south-west has not yet been hit, but it has changed hands at least four times in the past few days, the radio said.

"Montgomery throws waves upon waves of armour into this bottleneck, which he must take if his forces want to reach the town, but our guns destroy tank after tank. Between Lentini and Catania alone the countryside is littered with British tanks.

"Just before dusk the sea and sky are calm and empty, but when darkness falls the peace is suddenly transformed into a living inferno. Flares and tracer bullets criss-cross the skies. A sheet of flame shows where our bombers have hit an enemy ammunition ship with torpedoes. But the British Tommy is tough. He gives as good as he takes.

"Suddenly there is a report from H.Q.—'British paratroops descending on the Catania Plain.' Gun flashes immediately pierce the darkness. Still the bombardment from the sea goes on. Enemy bombers to the north are attacking the territory beyond Catania, and then they attack from all directions, from the land, from the air and from the sea, but our heroic defenders throw themselves into the fight in all directions."

FROM THE AIR

According to a Washington message, late reports indicate that the Allies have thrown in airborne troops in an attempt to take Catania from the rear.

Reuter's Special Correspondent near the Plain of Catania says that several miles of the plain were taken from the Axis by British troops, who attacked in brilliant moonlight.

An A.P. message from Madrid states that Berlin and Rome despatches say that one of Montgomery's main obstacles has been floods caused by recent mountain rains.

Axis forces in the Enna-Leonforte area are reported to be withdrawing towards the Membrodi Mountains, famed for generations as the home of Sicilian baudits. Axis despatches emphasise the great strength of the Allied forces in men and material, particularly in air power.—(Reuter, A.P. and P.A.)

Axis Leaders Decided on Measures

In an official statement of the meeting of Hitler and Mussolini, German radio said yesterday:—

"Both statesmen, in their capacity as Commanders-in-Chief of the armed forces of the Axis Powers, discussed the counter measures necessary in face of the battles now in progress on the two fronts.

"Appropriate counter measures have been decided upon after a realistic and objective examination of the present situation."—(Associated Press.)

Eisenhower Says "Bitter Fight Ahead"

GENERAL EISENHOWER, C.-in-C. Allied Forces, declared yesterday:—"Due to the nature of the terrain and the location of the enemy forces, the task facing the Eighth Army, including the Canadians, is one of bitter fighting, with a generally slow advance.

"This gives the Americans the chance of a more rapid advance against less resistance, thus overrunning substantial portions of the island and confining the enemy to progressively smaller areas."

Eisenhower said he was confident of complete Allied victory in Sicily. He explained that the resistance in front of the Eighth Army is entirely different from that in front of the Seventh Army. The American drive was splitting the Axis into segments.

"The Germans," he said, "are attempting to establish a strong line of defences, including Mount Etna, in the east of the island. In order to do so the Axis are bringing reinforcements from Italy and Germany."

AXIS VIEW

Captain Sertorius, German overseas news commentator, stated last night that the most remarkable feature of the present Sicilian situation was the stiffening of Axis resistance in the eastern coastal sector.

Denying reports that British forces had entered the suburbs of Catania, Sertorius said: "As before, fighting is taking place some distance from the city, mainly along the Rivers Simetu and Ditaina, which flow through the Catanian Plain.

"There all Montgomery's attacks have come to a halt, in spite of the fact that he has been employing very strong infantry and tank forces and that the long-range naval artillery of the British Fleet has again intervened in the fighting.

"General Patton has sent the main strength of the 7th Army into battle in the area of Enna. Its attempt to force a break-through and follow it up by swinging towards the east and west, has been frustrated by the elastic manœuvring of the defence. The bulk of the German and Italian forces has cleverly avoided the enemy's grip.

"All in all, the fighting is still likely to produce many surprises for the enemy, and the Allied High Command is in no way as near a large success as the British and American press claims they are. At any rate, there are several signs that the enemy is thinking of making additional landings in Sicily."—(Reuter.)

SENATE ELECTION ACTIVITY

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

THERE was much activity at Leinster House yesterday in connection with the forthcoming elections for the Senate. The chief centre of interest was the meeting of Fianna Fail deputies convened for the purpose of choosing candidates to be nominated on the Dail sub-panel. Twenty-two will, according to the Act, be elected on this sub-panel. Yesterday's meeting selected eighteen names for nomination, but it is unlikely that they will be able to elect that number.

Actually the party could nominate over thirty candidates—every two deputies have the right to nominate one, and there are sixty-seven Fianna Fail deputies in the new Dail—but it would be a tactical mistake to nominate so large a number, since it would distribute the party's voting power over a wide area, and thus cause many votes to be wasted. The party, apparently, regard eighteen as the maximum number that it can return on the Dail sub-panel.

ANXIOUS WAIT

The Taoiseach and all Ministers, with the exception of Mr. Sean Lemass, who is on holiday, were present at yesterday's meeting. Mr. Matthew O'Reilly, T.D., presided. A number of potential candidates waited anxiously for the result of the meeting. It is understood that each candidate was proposed and seconded, and when the full list, which was not disclosed, had been prepared the deputies voted on them on the P.R. principle.

It was learned yesterday that the Fine Gael party does not propose to hold a meeting to select candidates. Presumably, members of that body who wish to enter the contest will be free to make their own arrangements. The Labour Party have made certain selections, but these have not yet been disclosed.

Nominations for the several panels by Nominating Bodies will close at noon to-day. The number of candidates will probably reach 90.

NOMINEES

Mr. Wilfrid Brown, Senate Returning Officer, has received the following additional nominations:—

Soviets on Move From Mtsensk To Donbas Basin

PUSHING ahead from north-east, east and south, the Russian armies are now only 6½ miles due east of the city, and are fanning out westwards towards the great German base of Bryansk, Reuter cables from Moscow. Soviet tank troops have pushed to within 5 miles of the vital Orel-Bryansk railway, main German supply line, and have it now within easy shelling range.

On 500-Mile Front

The Russian armies, it is claimed, are now on the move in most of the key sectors of a curving 500-mile front extending from Mtsensk, north-east of Orel, to Voroshilovgrad in the Donbas.

Opening for New Thrust

With the capture of the "fortress" of Mtsensk, states Reuter's Special Correspondent, the road lies open for a new Soviet thrust towards Orel from the north-east. Heavy losses were inflicted on the German garrison of Mtsensk, it is stated. Before the artillery barrage preceding the attack proper was let loose, Soviet troops had already partially surrounded the town.

Soviet troops, it is claimed, are rapidly driving the Germans from the Byelgorod wedge less than three weeks after von Kluge started his offensive there.

There is heavy local fighting at both ends of the Donbas front. All day on Tuesday, south of Izyum, the Germans stubbornly, but in the end fruitlessly, defended the North Donetz crossings. The extreme southern end of the irregular 500-mile front saw some of the fiercest fighting of all. Crossing the River Mius forty miles south-west of Voroshilovgrad, Soviet troops fought bayonet battles in trenches and dug-outs,

German radio stated last night that German naval forces attacked important Soviet harbours on the eastern coast of the Sea of Azov and on the River Mius sector on Tuesday night. Supply and cargo installations were particularly badly hit, the radio asserted.—(A.P.)

Referring to the fighting north of Byelgorod in last night's German overseas news commentary from Berlin, Captain Sertorius said: "In this sector the Germans have carried out some rectifications in their front line of operations."

Sertorius declared that Russian attacks south of Sukhinichi slowed down on Tuesday, while pressure north and east of Orel increased and achieved some smaller break-ins which however, were sealed off, he stated. "On the central Donetz," he continued, "the new Soviet offensive had taken shape in the Izyum area, south-east of Kharkov, where Russian infantry and tanks were trying to advance south and south-west from their winter bridgeheads. Small break-ins were achieved, but they were at once sealed off."

COMMUNIQUE

To-night's Soviet communiqué reports: "During Wednesday our forces in the Orel direction, overcoming enemy resistance, continued their offensive and advanced from 6 to 8 kilometres (3 to 8 miles). The enemy, by repeated counter-attack, tried to stem the progress of our advancing forces. Our troops advancing north of Orel have occupied 40 more inhabited localities, including one district centre and the railway station of Otrado and the railway station of Pastukha — 15 kilometres (9 miles) north-east of Orel. East of Orel our troops have occupied 60 more inhabited localities. South of Orel our forces encountered stiff resistance from enemy artillery and enemy counter-attacks, but continued to advance. In the Byelgorod direction, our forces beat off enemy counter-attacks and continued to advance. In the South—in the Donbas, south of Izyum and south-west of Voroshilovgrad—local engagements took place, as a result of which our troops once more improved their positions considerably."

GERMANS SINK SOVIET SHIPS

GERMAN Radio last night claimed that their coast guns sank 10 Russian vessels in the reported attempt to land on the north Norwegian coast during Monday night.

The attempt was made in the Varanger fjord, south of Vardoe and Kiberg, by 40 to 60 vessels, escorted by light naval forces, said the radio.—(Reuter.)

Medical Evidence in Murder Charge

At the resumed hearing at Mitchelstown yesterday of the charge against John O'Donoghue (25), of Knockamane, Kilbehenny, Co. Limerick, of the murder of Mary Moher (63), widow, of the same place. Dr. John McGrath, State pathologist, said that on the 29th June last he carried out a post-mortem examination on the body of Mary Moher, assisted by Dr. J. McCarthy, Mitchelstown, and said that in his opinion the cause of death was shock, asphyxia and haemorrhage, produced by injuries inflicted shortly before death. The injuries could have been caused by a man's hands and pressure.

After technical evidence had been given, Detective J. Barrett, of Union quay, Cork, said that on the 29th June the accused man, after being cautioned, said to him: "I went down the road and got into the house. I got down to the room and tore the clothes off. I murdered Mrs. Moher." Mr. Finn, solicitor for O'Donoghue, objected, but the Court admitted the statement and noted the objection. The case was adjourned until to-day.

Sisters Found Dead in Belfast

TWO elderly sisters, named Montgomery, were found dead in their house at 48 Ardenlee Parade, Belfast, last night. The discovery was made by their brother when he returned home after a walk.

He found one of the sisters lying in a room with terrible injuries to her head. A hammer, with which, apparently, the blows had been inflicted, was lying beside the body. The other sister was found in the kitchen, with her throat cut.

The bodies were removed to the Morgue.

Three Japanese Warships Sunk

One cruiser and two destroyers were sunk, and a third destroyer probably sunk, when American bombers of every type joined in routing another Japanese attempt to rush reinforcements and supplies to the garrison at Munda, New Georgia, now threatened with extermination.

The convoy, consisting of three light cruisers and six destroyers, escorting two transports, was trying to run the blockade between New Georgia and Kolombangara Island to the north when it was intercepted at dawn on Tuesday, says Reuter's Special Correspondent at Allied H.Q., S.W. Pacific.

This is the third time that a Japanese attempt to reinforce their troops on New Georgia has been smashed.

Four U.S. 'planes are missing.

Japanese naval losses in this area this month are: Sunk—Three cruisers, 13 destroyers, one submarine chaser, one cargo ship and one tanker. Probably sunk—Five destroyers, damaged five destroyers and four merchantmen.

Dauntless dive-bombers have dropped 18 tons of bombs on Minda, and Japanese bases from Bougainville to the Dutch East Indies have been raided.—(Reuter.)

Last night's U.S. Navy Dpartment communiqué said: "Early on July 20. Japanese bombers dropped several bombs on Funafutis, in the Ellice Islands. No damage was reported and no one hurt.

"Two light U.S. surface units bombarded the main Japanese camp and Gertrude Cove area on Kiska. Enemy guns did not reply."

Gin Drinkers on a Ration

A man who regularly bought a 10-glass bottle of gin per month in 1939 cannot now obtain more than one glass in the same period.

This drastic reduction in supplies of gin follows a recent restriction on distilling in Britain, which has forced the producers to cut down sales to ten per cent. of the 1939 quota.

Gin is the basis of the majority of cocktail drinks, and the increase in lounge bars and the number of women patrons have occasioned a considerable increase in the demand for this product. Nevertheless, retailers are not passing on the restrictions to their normal customers though gin will not be sold in bottle. Most of the publicans with a trade in gin hope to be able to work for three or four months on stocks.

Traders who sell gin in bottle are, however, heavily hit, and are not likely to be able to continue supplying normal demands. It is feared that a black market in gin, similiar to that which obtained in the case of Scotch whisky, will be created by the circumstances.

Mr. Ernest Bevin, British Minister of Labour, said at Blackpool yesterday that he could foresee a time when industry would benefit by giving workers four weeks' holidays, with pay, each year.

Dublin Tobacco Shop Robbery

Leaving bloodstains at the door, on the shattered window, and on the floor of Mr. R. S. Motyer's tobacco shop in Grafton street, Dublin, a raider, early yesterday morning, escaped with £50 worth of pipes, tobacco and cigarettes. Assistants arriving for work found police investigating the robbery. It is understood that a man has been detained, and that some of the goods have been recovered.

A terrific explosion occurred in a tunnel at Telemark, in Southern Norway, when a dynamite dump blew up yesterday, Norwegian radio said last night.

Pope's Statement on Rome Bombing

THE POPE has addressed the following letter to Cardinal Francesco Marchetti Selvaggiani, his Vicar-General in Rome, says the Italian News Agency:—

"To you, who take such a close part in our government and in our pastoral work in the Diocese of Rome, the centre of the Catholic world and of Christian thought and faith, we wish to express our sympathy in this very bitter hour in which our souls are plunged.

"You are aware that the sad spectacle of the massacres and of ruins piling up—painful accessories of this present war—against unarmed and innocent populations induced us from the beginning of the war to do everything in our power to prevent sentiments and principles of humanity from being completely subjected by passions, even during the clashes of the armies.

RESPECT URGED

For this reason, in our message to all the faithful we recalled to the belligerents on both sides that if they want to uphold the dignity of their country and the honour of their armies, they should respect the safety of peaceful citizens and the monuments of faith and civilisation.

We would like to say to them: Think of the severe judgment which future generations will pass against those who destroy all that should have been jealously looked after and preserved because it constituted the riches and glory of all humanity and the progress of people. Consider that hate never was the mother of peace, and that resentment, provoked by vast and unnecessary destruction, delays and renders less stable and less serene the day of a peaceful understanding which cannot persist in the humiliation of the vanquished, but which is founded only on fraternal agreement which conciliates and moderates passion and bitterness.'

As Archbishop of this great city, we did all that was possible—and you, my dear Cardinal, have followed all our demarches—to spare our much-beloved Rome the horrors and devastation of aerial bombing. Without wanting to reiterate the immense historical importance of this venerable city for us, Rome is the holy city of Catholicism, to which Christ gave new glory—Rome, whose underground shelters during the period of the great persecution were first used by Christians and martyrs who rendered sacred the amphitheatres and the arenas, and whose tombs—cradles of Christianity—are still places of prayer; Rome, whose territory is filled with buildings of the Roman dioceses and numerous institutes and Pontifical works, and with international institutes and colleges dependent on us, and innumerable sanctuaries without counting our magnificent patriarchal basilicas, many libraries and works of the highest order and art; Rome, where many people flock from all over the world, not only to learn the Creed, but also ancient wisdom, and who consider the city a lighthouse of civilisation and Christian virtues.

"But, in addition, almost in the centre of Rome—and, therefore, exposed to the danger of air attacks—is our Vatican City, an independent State, and an independent neutral State, which shelters priceless treasures, sacred not only to the Apostolic See, but to the whole Catholic world.

HOPE DASHED

"We have several times made this clear, and asked for the safety of Rome in the name of human dignity and Christian civilisation. It seemed possible for us to hope that the value of reason—the authority we enjoy and the impartiality we have assumed towards everyone without distinction of nationality or religion would have assured us the comfort among such bitterness of finding a favourable reception to our demarches by both the belligerent parties in favour of Rome.

"But, alas, our hope, so reasonable, was dashed. Then what we feared occurred. That which we foresaw is now a sad reality, for one of the most treasured of the Roman basilicas, that of San Lorenzo Without the Walls, which was held in veneration by all Catholics for the ancient memories

Allied Transports Sunk—Berlin

The German News Agency stated yesterday that two Allied transports taking Canadian troops to the Mediterranean had been sunk off the Portuguese coast. Reconnaissance photographs showed that one was of 20,000 tons, and of the Duchess class, and the other 15,000 tons, and of the Orduna class, said the Agency.—(Reuter.)

R.U.C. Man Drowned

Watched by his wife and two children, with whom he was picnicking near Castlederg, Co. Londonderry, Isaac Stewart, a member of the R.U.C., was drowned while bathing in Lough Derg yesterday evening. Soon after he entered the water he got into difficulties and sank in a deep pool, despite attempts to save him. His body was afterwards recovered by a constable. He was a native of Dungiven, Co. Londonderry.

T.U.C. on Rights of Doctors

THAT doctors' rights would not be filched if they came to terms with the National Health Insurance Society, was the opinion expressed by Miss O'Connor (Irish Women Workers' Union) at the Trades Union Congress in Cork yesterday, when the National Health section of the report of the National Executive was adopted.

Moving the adoption, Mr. E. P. Hart, National Executive, said they had opposition from doctors and dentists, but the latter had given way. These benefits were due, not to the Government, but to the Secretary, Mr. Henderson, and members of the Committee, who threatened to resign, and thereby forced the Government as to hospital treatment and benefits. The doctors still opposed it because they wanted financial benefit for themselves.

HELP FOR POOR

Miss O'Connor (Irish Women Workers) said they should not forget that in the past Dublin doctors had given of their best to the sick poor, and very often without remuneration. Doctors had a close trade union, and could not be blamed for looking for their rights, but she did not think those rights would be filched if they came to terms with the National Health Society.

Mr. T. Looney, T.D., Cork, as a member of the National Health Insurance Committee, thought the income limit should be raised by at least £100. Doctors in this country, he said, had received £60,000 a year just for birth certification alone, without giving treatment to insured members.

Mr. W. McCullagh, Belfast Trades Council, thought the trades union movement, as a whole, must formulate a scheme similar to the Beveridge plan in England, and pressure should be brought to bear on both Irish Governments to bring about better social existence for all.

Mr. Gilbert Lynch (Amalgamated Transport) said that, before the sweepstakes, a good deal of wealth had poured into the hospitals, but a complete change had now been brought about, and, to some extent, our hospitals had become a vested interest for certain sections of the community.

BLACK-MARKETING

Failure of the Government to prevent racketeering and black markets, or to find a solution for the unemployment problem, were denounced by Mr. Michael J. Keyes, T.D., in his presidential address.

Racketeering and black marketing were not merely scandalous, said Mr. Keyes, they were criminal, and as such they should be treated with the utmost severity. There were many who considered them no less criminal than any activity designed to undermine or to interfere with the national security and the military defence of the State.

The problem of providing a solution for unemployment "remained the greatest of all the failures of the Government. We do not minimise the difficulties, but we cannot overlook the fact that at no time has the Government made any attempt to grapple with the problem." What provision was being made to meet the situation that would arise when hostilities ceased. None, so far as he could see.

SOCIAL SERVICE

Welcoming the delegates when they visited Sunbeam-Wolsey, Mr. William Dwyer said that for fifteen years they had worked in the closest collaboration with all trade unions. They had recently instituted a social service scheme which had been of great benefit to their workers, lessened time lost through illness, and increased productivity per head to a remarkable degree.

In the afternoon the Congress delegates were shown over the Sunbeam Wolsey factory at Millfield, and were afterwards entertained by Mr. W. Dwyer, the managing director. Mr. Dwyer said that they had extended their social service scheme, which had been of the greatest benefit to the employés, improving their health and thereby increasing their productivity. He was glad to say they never had a strike at the factory.

Mr. Getwood, Belfast, the incoming President of the T.U.C., expressed the wish that the "linen lords" in the North of Ireland could have seen what the Sunbeam Wolsey factory had done for their employés. He admitted that there had been some improvement in the factories in the North recently, but those improvements were fifty years behind the times.

P.O. Rates in Eire and Britain

Mr. Brooke (C., Lewisham, W.) asked the British Postmaster-General, in the House of Commons, if he is aware that at existing rates of postage it is cheaper to send a parcel under 2lb. to Eire than to an address anywhere in Great Britain or Northern Ireland, and whether he will alter this.

Capt. Crookshank—Yes, sir. This has been the case since 1940, when it was decided to retain the existing rates for parcels to Eire, although war-time increases were being made in the rates for inland parcels. It is advantageous that the parcel post rates from the United Kingdom to Eire should be as they now are, the same as those in the reverse direction and within Eire. I do not, as at present advised, propose to alter the existing rates.

Theft Charge Against Women Fails

A 22 years old married woman, Veronica Christina Johansen (otherwise Byrne), Lower Mount street, was, at the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court yesterday, found "not guilty" of stealing £46 from a man in a lanewav off South Frederick street on December 9 last. Joan Wright (26), Lower Baggot street, was found not guilty of a similar charge by direction of Judge Shannon.

Mr. Sean Hooper (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor), prosecuting, said that the case was a simple, but unsavoury one. The man was a bookmaker, who, after returning from a coursing meeting in Newbridge, spent four hours in a Dublin public-house. After closing time he was accosted by Joan Wright in Nassau street. Johansen came to where they were, put her arms around the man and "pulled him about." The man later discovered that £46 in notes had disappeared from the breast pocket of his jacket. Next day Johansen lodged £50 in a G.P.O. savings account.

Denis Quinsliek, a Dublin bookmaker, told how the roll of notes was missing from his pocket. Only the girls had parted with him in the laneway.

Judge Shannon said that the man, who found himself in the unhappy position of having "consorted with ladies," had happened, deserved credit for having the courage to go to the Guards and for coming forward to give evidence.

"Three-Card Trick" Penalty

The question whether the "three-card trick" is a game of skill or of chance came up in the Dublin District Court yesterday, when John O'Neill, labourer, North King street, Dublin, was fined 40/- for playing the game in the street. Other charges were dismissed.

Discussing the game, District Justice Lennon said that he had received a letter, after a similar case, from a man who said that he could win every time at this game, which the writer regarded as a game of skill. Mr. Lennon said that he believed it was really a game of chance.

Detective-Sergeant M. Byrne said that he believed he could win at the game if he watched it for a long time, but he held it was a game of chance, and was seldom honestly played. A girl had been playing when he caught O'Neill. A man had won 10/-, but he probably was an accomplice of O'Neill's.

Claim for Architect's Fees

Mr. Justice Haugh, in the High Court yesterday, gave Patrick J. Munden, 1 South Frederick street, Dublin, judgment for £135 odd, with costs, in a claim against Mrs. Bessie Elkinson, St. Brendan's, Grosvenor road, Rathmines, Dublin, for £405 odd as architect's fees in connection with property at Clareville, Dartry road; at Kinmage, and at Elm Villa, Sandymount, Dublin.

Mrs. Elkinson denied that the amount claimed was due.

Mr. J. A. Costello, S.C., Mr. Nolan Whelan, S.C., and Mr. O'B. Fitzgerald (instructed by Mr. James Fagan), appeared for Mr. Munden; and Mr. Maurice Walker, S.C., and Mr. Richard Cherry (instructed by Messrs. Franks and Oulton) for Mrs. Elkinson.

STORE CATTLE SALES

Gavin Low, Ltd.—Larger numbers on offer, and an increase in the attendance of buyers. The demand, however, was rather slow, and the prices of heavy aged bullocks were lower by about 2/- per cwt. the current rate being from 42/- to 65/-. Young cattle were again short of requirements, and quickly disposed of at firm prices. At Ballbriggan on Monday there was a full attendance of buyers, and trade was very active at recent rates. Best sorts from 67/- to 68/- per cwt., while hullock heifers and young cattle were in keen demand at top prices.

Gaddy and Sons.—Numbers on offer larger, and, with a full attendance of buyers, a firm trade prevailed and an excellent clearance was effected at slightly lower prices, with the exception of really top quality heavy bullocks, which made late rates. Best bullocks £42 to £36 6d.; to 45/- with a few extra fancy lots making £39/- to 71 per cwt.). Best heifers £29 10/- to £33 (64/- to 65/- per cwt.). Many other bullocks and heifers £29 10/- to £20 (64/6 to 60/- per cwt.). Younger classes—£18 10/- to £13.

Craigie Bros.—Large increase in numbers, and, with a full attendance of buyers, trade ruled steady, throughout. Prices varied little from last week, and a complete clearance was effected. Best bullocks made from £40 15/- to £30 10/-; others from £29 to £23. Best heifers from £30 10/- to £24; others from £25 to £19. Younger stock from £22 to £11.

WOOL

BRADFORD.—Exporters of yarns have received their rations for current raining period and, although experience in some yarns a good deal, aggregate quantity is about same as in previous period. This has brought on more business in yarn markets, although there is no general movement in yarn quotations. Some spinners are insisting on slight advance.

Suntop for Irish Oaks

INTEREST in to-day's race for the Irish Oaks at the Curragh has been enlivened by the amount of support given during the past few days to Neartic. Major McCalmont's filly is bred well enough to win anything, but she has yet to prove her ability in public if one excludes her couple of successes last season against moderate company, and, taking public form as a more reliable guide, a choice is made of who, won the Irish 1,000 Guineas in the style of a filly possessed of plenty of stamina. Neartic and Khazar are taken as likely to do best of the others.

Bardic has shown up prominently in his previous races this season and may return to winning form in the Scurry Handicap, in which Poolfax may take a lot of beating despite the weight. Arctic Sun should repay support for his selected engagement. Selections:—

Scurry Handicap—Bardic.

Osborne Plate—Arctic Sun, if ab., Tabrik.

Maddenstown Plate—C. Rogers' Selected.

Irish Oaks—Suntop win; Neartic and Khazar places.

The 100 miles championship of Ireland will be held on Sunday next over the usual Ashtown Navan - Trim - Blackbull course. Entries are J. N. Fagan (Celtic), S. O'Connor (County Dublin), J. M. Fearon (I.R.C.), J. Quinn (National), M. Kelly (I.R.C.) (holder).

A two-day meeting, under the auspices of the 42nd Rifle Battalion, will be held at O'Connell Sports Ground, Clontarf road, on August 7 and 8.

Holders Take Their Profits

PUBLIC interest was on a fairly good scale on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday. Profit taking produced some irregularity in price movements, but the undertone locally remained firm. cross-Channel industrials were better.

There was a slight recovery in Home Funds. Second National Loan rose to 114¾. Security 5% 1957/61 and 4½ p.c. Land Bonds to 118. 3½ p.c. War Loan hardened to 103¾ and Waterford 3½ p.c. sqiarefree paid to 103.

Bank of Ireland stock fell over a point to 357½, and Nationals shed pence at 44/6, but Hiberuians rose to 50/6. Guinness made up with 200 taking and relapsed to 120/-, while the Pref. gave way to 15¾.

There was again a good business in Home Rails, but prices were easier. Great Northern Ord. drooped to 19½, and the Pref. to 41¾, but the Deb. gained 3/- at 74¾. Great Southern issues held up, apart from the Deb., which gave way to 56¾.

Dublin Transport Ord. eased to 24/6, but Carroll Ord. improved to 35/6, and the Pref. recovered to 28/-. Dockrell Ord. tended higher to 8/10½, and Afrex Thom 3rd preference (2/1) to 2/4½. Times Preferences were in keen request and the 1st jumped another 1/- to 88/6, while the 2nd made headway to 23/-.

B.A.T. Ord. soared 1¼ to 105/6 and Imperial Tobacco Ord. quoted 149/44. Coats Ord. strengthened 1/1½ to 46/9, but Bleachers Ord. and Courtaulds marked fractional losses. R. Thomas Ord. were strong on the increase in the dividend.

Bradshaw Takes Golf Prize by One Stroke

THERE was only one stroke between the Irish champion, Harry Bradshaw, Adam Whiston and Eddie Hackett in the G.U.I. 36 holes professional competition yesterday at Hermitage, victory going to the Kilcroney man, who, although putting a ball out of bounds at the third in the morning, and another at the 18th in the evening, finished in 151 nett, or 145 gross.

Bradshaw's score was three under the bogey of the course for the two rounds. In the morning Bradshaw had a very fine 72 (36 and 36), including the one of bounds alluded to, and, out in 34 in the evening, he finished in 73. In addition to the out of bounds off his second at the 15th, he cut his second to behind the trees at the 12th, and, as usual, took three putts at the 14th.

Hackett was very steady and consistent with a couple of 76s, and, with a little luck on his first round of 77, Whiston would have made it an even more exciting finish. Hackett was going very well to the turn on the second round, which he reached in 34, but he required 40 for the holes in. The prize for the best gross went to Kane.

Sicilian Progress

The battle for Sicily evidently has reached a critical stage. Enna, which is the geographical, and in some respects the strategic, centre of the island, has fallen to the Americans, who assailed it with a two-fold thrust from Gela to Agrigento, while General Montgomery's British forces were attacking Catania. The position of the German units who are defending Catania seems to have become exceedingly difficult. According to Reuter's reports, the Catanian plain has been virtually isolated by the Americans' capture of Enna, and the Germans' only way of retreat is along the road and railway from Catania to Messina. These lines of communication run along the coast around the base of Mount Etna, much as the old Dublin and South-Eastern line runs from Westland row to Wicklow. Road and rail alike are exposed to short-range attack from the sea, and during the last week or so powerful units of th. British fleet in the Ionian Sea have been keeping the area under constant bombardment. Messina and its neighbouring districts also have been subjected to violent air raids, and it is suggested that the line of retreat along the coast has been made almost impossible. On the other hand, reports from various sources suggest that the Axis High Command, having recognised the overwhelming strength of the invading Allies, has decided to fight a delaying action at Catania, where resistance to the British Eighth Army has been intense, and at the same time to withdraw the bulk of the German and Italian armies from other parts of the island to the north-east corner, just as in the case of Tunisia they were withdrawn to the Cape Bon Peninsula. Such a decision would mean the abandonment of Palermo, Sicily's capital, which is substantially larger than Dublin, and the basing of all future military operations on Messina. It is possible, of course, that the delaying action at Catania is being fought in order to enable reinforcements to be brought from the mainland; but, in view of the comparatively slight resistance which has been offered to General Patton's advance to Enna, it seems to be doubtful that the Axis forces will give serious battle in the southern half of the island, which now has been cut in two by the Allies.

One of the most remarkable features of the Sicilian campaign up to the present has been the apparently complete superiority of the Allies in the air. Without that advantage the British and Americans never could have landed such large masses of men and material with such speed and such relatively negligible losses. Their combined air forces seem to enjoy far greater strength than they enjoyed during the Tunisian campaign; and this mastery of the air, added to the Anglo-American command of the sea, which seems to be almost undisputed, has been of tremendous value to the invading forces. The invasion, so far, has moved with almost copy-book precision. Having surmounted the initial difficulties of landing on fairly well-defended beaches, the British and Americans contrived within a few days not only to establish substantial bridgeheads, but also to join their forces in a continuous front. Now that Enna has been captured, roughly half the territory of Sicily is in Allied hands; and, if Catania should fall, the whole position of the Axis garrison would become critical. The evident reluctance of the Axis authorities to commit themselves to major operations in Sicily suggests that they expect the Allies to supplement the invasion of Sicily by an attempted landing somewhere else along Europe's Mediterranean coast. It must be remembered that the British and Americans, at an outside estimate, have employed not more than one-third of their available forces in the Sicilian campaign. It has been a spectacular success, so far as it has gone; but the Axis obviously suspects that further operations are being contemplated.

Labour in America

All seems, for the time being, to be quiet on the American labour front. Nevertheless, it must be clear that the events of the last few months, centring around the two strikes of Mr. John J. Lewis's coal-miners, have confronted the United States in general, and President Roosevelt in particular, with a set of dangerous problems. Although the strikes resulted in a temporary set-back to organised labour, they, nevertheless, showed the great unions that it was in their power to exercise a crippling effect upon American industry; and the knowledge is likely to be turned to useful purpose. One consequence is indicated by the Washington Correspondent of The Times. He directs attention to various signs that labour is preparing itself to take an active part in the politics of the United States. Mr. Lewis and the "policy committee" of his powerful union are believed to be contemplating the formation, for the first time in United States history, of a national Labour Party. He proposes, first, to reintegrate the unions, which have been divided for some years past, and, to that end, apparently is prepared to bring his own United Mine Workers back into the comparatively conservative fold of the American Federation of Labour. The next step will be to bring in the other unions that hitherto have been at schism with the Federation, and, when all are in harmony, the way will be clear for the creation of a homogenous party, strong enough to nominate candidates for Congress in opposition to both the Democrats and the Republicans. This plan, comments The Times's Correspondent, may fail; but, if it should succeed, the organisation thus created probably would be strong enough to hold the balance of power in national elections. The prospect cannot be pleasing to President Roosevelt; yet he himself has been responsible for this emergence of labour. His country always has claimed to be the democracy sans pareil, the exemplar of human equality and brotherhood. In regard, however, to what is called social legislation, it has lagged behind most of the countries of Europe, including our own; and, until President Roosevelt brought his "new deal" into operation ten years ago, the rights of the worker were very tenuous indeed. President Roosevelt gave the worker new rights and powers. He gave them in the teeth of determined opposition from Congress, which was then, as it is in even greater measure to-day, representative of the employers and correspondingly conservative. Now—from the political point of view—he discovers that he has created a Frankenstein's monster. Labour, organised as a result of the powers that he conferred upon it, has taken the bit in its teeth, and is no longer content to sue for the favours of himself or anybody else, but prefers to employ its own new-found strength. The President hardly can be enjoying himself. Inevitably, his political enemies—and many of his political friends—are swelling the chorus of "we told you so," while the experience of the last few months must have persuaded him that a formidable challenge has arisen to his policy. That policy is, in a sentence, to increase America's "war effort" to the largest possible degree without any considerable increase in the cost of living. Mr. Lewis has protested, through the medium of the strike, against the President's doctrine, inasmuch as he has called for a heavy increase in wages. Will the new Labour Party—if it comes into existence at all—raise an even more insistent demand?

CLOTHING OF DUBLIN POOR

THE Lord Mayor of Dublin, Alderman O'Sullivan, T.D., is arranging to call a conference of the heads of various charitable organisations in Dublin to discuss the possibility of obtaining supplies of clothing for the poor of Dublin in the coming winter. The Lord Mayor made this announcement at the 153rd annual general meeting of the Sick and Indigent Roomkeepers' Society, held in Dublin yesterday in response to an appeal by the President of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, who said that the great difficulty this year would be that of supplies of clothing, and he urged that public representatives would do all they could to help the charitable organisations.

Alderman Alfred Byrne, T.D., said that these ill-clothed children were potential victims of tuberculosis. Instead of spending money on sanatoria, it should be spent on the children, thereby preventing the disease. Alderman P. S. Doyle, T.D., stated that a wide gap still remained to be filled by private charity, efficiently organised by such bodies as the Roomkeepers.

The annual report showed that, during the year, 5,277 deserving poor families had been assisted, for a total expenditure (including the distribution of fuel) of £4,400. No genuine case was ever rejected. In many cases, complete outfits of clothing had been supplied to persons seeking employment. It was the work of the Society to rescue what might be called "the mass of untouched poverty," and an appeal was made to all citizens to enable the Society to continue that work.

After the Wedding at Christ Church, Blackrock, of Mr. Hamilton B. Blakeney and Miss Joy McKinley.

CRIME IN IRELAND

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Will you allow me to supplement Seamus Bourke's letter drawing attention to the increase of serious crime in Ireland?

Crimes of passion, such as murder, violence and sexual offences, indicate a lessening of self-control and a contempt for religious and civil authority. But, to my mind, scarcely less serious is the increase of dishonesty. In this neighbourhood, for example, robbery of gardens, especially at this time of year, goes on almost unchecked. Walls, hedges, wire fences are no protection against marauders. Fruit, vegetables, even small shrubs and flowers, the latter often pulled up by the roots, are regularly stolen. One dare not leave about, within one's own place, any garden tools or implements. In my garden I put in, a few years ago, a number of young pear trees and apple trees. More than once in the past these have been almost stript bare in one night or early morning long before the fruit was ripe. When one finds quantities of small, hard, immature pears scattered in the field outside the garden one can only account of it as pure hooliganism.

We do not sell our garden produce. What is not required for household purposes we gladly give away. But certainly we do not get any encouragement in this respect. And what has been our experience here is that of a number of other residents in this district. I know one amateur gardener who has cut down all his fruit trees because he was unable to cope with the breaking down of his fences and the trampling of his vegetables by the spoilers.

Apart from the vexation and discouragement owners of gardens have to bear, it seems to me to be a lowering of the public standard of morality that these thieves should get away with their crime with such regularity. Operations this year have already commenced. Unless we are able to get some more effective protection than we have at present, the exasperating experience of former years is likely to be repeated.—Yours, etc.,

T. W. E. DRURY.

Co. Dublin.

MILLION WORDS AT 40/- PER 1,000

An Irish glossary, containing well over a million words, compiled in the Dingle peninsula during the last seven years, has been completed, and Government officials are now considering the matter of its publication. At one stage in its progress it was stated by a Department of Finance official that the compilation of it would cost about £2,500, the printing would cost from £4,000 to £6,000, that it would have to be published in about 20 volumes, of which not more than 100 sets were likely to be sold.

The work was commissioned by the Department of Education in 1935, under a scheme authorising it to spend money on publishing textbooks for secondary schools. The man selected was Mr. Sean Kavanagh, who was stated by Mr. Joseph O'Neill, Secretary of the Department of Education, to have given up a position of £500 or £600 a year as a secondary school teacher to devote himself to this work. Mr. Kavanagh, who is better known in his native Dunquin, Co. Kerry, as Sean a Chota, is one of the best-known speakers of Irish in that famous Irish-speaking district.

The work was commissioned on a basis of 40/- per thousand words, and by 1940 a sum of £993 had been paid for the collection. The collector took the words of the Irish language listed alphabetically, and then gathered phrases and sayings showing how these words were used. The purpose, according to Mr. O'Neill, was "to gather up all the idioms still in existence there (in the Dingle peninsula) before it is too late."

The work done on the glossary came before the Committee of Public Accounts in 1938, when a member of the Committee said that the material accepted under the letter "C" had taken about 2½ years to prepare, and totalled 347,000 words.
